What We Had is the start of a new era for me. It's a song that talks about relationship loss, and heartbreak. For me, it was about my first teenage heartbreak.

The song reflects upon the loss of the relationship as a whole. It talks about confusion, regret, and simply what could have been done differently. Even with all these feelings in consideration, we were satisfied with what we had. The verses state confusion, and almost gives you a visual representation of the heartbreak. As you move into the chorus, the lyrics express the reflection upon the relationship, and how even though on the outside it may have looked pretty, in reality it was damaged. As you move to the bridge and outro, the lyrics simply just repeat. The repetition of the lyrics "I will try again" indicates how the relationship continued to go round and round, as said in the verses, and how it almost always, ended up at step one.

The song also a reminder to people, that even though we may be teenagers and may have not experienced real love yet, we will still experience the feeling of teenage heartbreak once in our lives. I hope this song can create an impact upon people.
